11. content experts and be able to build instructional skills that relate directly to that content area. This has become more important due to the increased rigor of the Common Core. Teachers would be given their preference to the extent possible, and have the opportunity to change their assignment, much as they do today. Teachers would teach either grades 2/3 or grades 4/5 (a later question addresses the multi-grade component).

12. Currently, children have TLT time during which they may switch teachers and groups. Instead of one TLT time (usually for literacy), Think Tank is proposing two slots for What I Need (WIN), one for literacy and one for math. WIN times would be scheduled so that children would not be pulled from core instruction. During WIN time, children could receive special services, interventions and

Structure of the day:

Currently, children have one main general education teacher and see other teachers and professionals for specials, interventions and services. The Think Tank proposes that children will have two main

13. teachers, with the potential for a two-year relationship. Basically, students would spend half their day with one of these teachers and half with the other, specials being embedded into the day. This structure starts with second grade, Pre-K, K and first grade being unchanged.

Strategic grouping of children in literacy/social studies:

The curriculum and Common Core in literacy and social studies is well suited to a 2/3 and 4/5 15. structure. Over the course of two years, students would experience 8 integrated modules. Students would continue to have guided instruction in small groups, but teachers would have fewer guided groups than currently.

Strategic grouping of children in STEAM/math:

These subjects, especially math, are currently taught more sequentially and so are not proposed for a multi-grade approach. Think Tank is proposing that most students would be in groups of grade-level papers, no child would be instructed below their grade-level but could receive higher than grade level

17. peers; no child would be instructed below their grade-level but could receive higher than grade level. As an example, our student data shows that we would have enough students to have a class of second graders getting third grade math--they could be accelerated but still with grade-level peers. WIN would address struggling learners. These groups would stay together for the whole STEAM/math block. There may be some exceptions based on individual student needs.

Homeroom:

Whichever main teacher the child begins the day with will be their homeroom teacher. Children will 19. start and end the day with a short period of time for homeroom, which is a time for taking care of routine matters, for activities related to the District 41 Learner Characteristics and for strengthening a sense of community.
